Catalogue Text

These pieces play with concepts of perception and identity. We have a specific region in our brain dedicated to facial recognition and memory. This work seeks to depict how faces become distorted in our memories and colored with physiognomy: the movement facial features. All works are based on strangers observed in LA. I would hold their face in my memory and as I remember the way it moved during interactions, parts would become distorted, exaggerated, then I began to sculpt.

Catalogue Text	Returning to the square and circle is a series of bronze sculptures which demonstrate the importance of “the line” and what “to say” expressing a short story using the most basics of shape: 3D childlike “stickman” translated into square and circular shapes. Detail such as hands, fingers, feet, facials, and color play little or no role as the overall shape “speaks”. Jason and the Golden Fleece fascinated me since childhood.
